Wilton, CT, USA, January 17, 2023 -- Letters boldly signed by early American historical giants George Washington, John Hancock and Thomas Paine, plus a 1963 Christmas card signed by both JFK and Jackie, and an archive of material signed by Lincoln and Douglas, will all come up for bid in University Archives's™ online auction slated for Wednesday, February 1st at 11 am Eastern time. The Rare Manuscripts, Books & Sports Memorabilia auction features historical material from multiple collecting categories. All 460 lots are up for viewing and bidding now (on the University Archives website: www.UniversityArchives.com), plus LiveAuctioneers.com and Invaluable.com. Telephone and absentee bids will be taken, but there's no live gallery bidding. Our February auction offers many exceptional buying and collecting opportunities and is especially strong in the U.S. Presidential, Early American, Science and Sports collecting categories, with 25 lots relating to professional baseball, basketball, hockey, boxing, soccer and even horse-racing, said John Reznikoff, the president and owner of University Archives. In addition, Mr. Reznikoff added, the Aviation/Space, Entertainment, Literature, Art, and Music categories are also abundantly represented. February's assortment of historical documents, rare books, photographs, relics, ephemera, exnumia, ceramics, apparel and sports memorabilia should start the year off with a bang. Collectors, mark your calendars for this important auction. George Washington signed a document as G. Washington, authorizing the discharge of Corp. Robert Pappé from a Horse Troop on Dec. 10, 1783. In recognition of his attention and fidelity to Washington, Pappé was awarded his military-issued Horse, Arms and Accoutrements. Days later, Washington resigned his military commission as Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Army at Annapolis, Md. (est. $20,000-$30,000). Patriot pamphleteer Thomas Paine wrote an autograph letter signed to a Quaker friend in London on July 12, 1806, confirming reports that he had narrowly missed injury or death on Christmas Eve 1805, when an assailant opened fire at Paine's home in New Rochelle, New York, possibly motivated by Paine's public criticism of Christianity or views in general (est. $24,000-$35,000). A three-page autograph letter signed by John Hancock on March 11, 1777 conveyed the latest news from Philadelphia, where the Continental Congress was to convene, to his wife Dolly in Baltimore. In it, Hancock mentions (but discounts rumors) that General Howe is bent on coming here, [with] another report that the Merchants at New York are packing their goods and putting them on board ships and that the troops are going away (est. $20,000-$30,000). An amazing legal archive of eight documents totaling 34 pages from 1838, signed by two political giants, Abraham Lincoln and Stephen Douglas, and foreshadowing their classic debates for the Illinois Senate seat 20 years later, should bring $18,000-$20,000. The documents, from a single case file, illustrate just one non-litigation role that Lincoln fulfilled during his 25 years of law practice. A 1963 Hallmark Christmas card was boldly signed by President John F. Kennedy and First Lady Jackie Kennedy just days before his assassination and was never mailed. The words "Blessed Christmas" had been excised at the last minute in a gesture of sensitivity towards JFK's Jewish friends, and the card was simply engraved "With best wishes for a Happy New Year." (est. $15,000-$20,000.) The original seven-page typed agreement in which George and Ira Gershwin, Dubose Heyward and Dorothy Heyward granted the Theatre Guild of New York the rights to produce their classic opera Porgy and Bess for the very first stage performance in 1935, boldly signed by the composer, lyricist and authors, should realize $15,000-$20,000. Albert Einstein signed a cryptic dedicatory inscription, "Two years after the Fall of the German Goyim. / Kindly granted / Albert Einstein / 1935" on the flyleaf of a first edition copy of his German language book Mein Weltbild, or The World As I See It. His biblical allusion to a fall referred to Hitler's rise in Germany in 1933. The book is expected to finish at $12,000-$14,000. A one-page typed letter boldly signed by Walt Disney, PSA/DNA slabbed and certified authentic, in which he writes a flattering recommendation letter for a Robert Neuschotz, a former employee in Disney's Special Effects Department, should fetch $6,000-$7,000. He was of great assistance in devising and developing devices that have proven to be of value to this organization, Disney wrote. A 1996-1997 Michael Jordan home game-worn Chicago Bulls jersey, emblazoned with Jordan's iconic player number 23 in scarlet, is expected to change hands for $6,000-$7,000. The jersey, showing light wear, is graded A5 and comes with a MEARS Letter of Authenticity. That season was one of Jordan's most outstanding in terms of points, assists, steals and rebounds. A Wayne Gretzky All-Star exhibition game-worn purple, white, and black sweater, signed and dedicated by the Canadian "Great One" to Major League Baseball player number "99" verso, has an estimate of $4,500-$5,500. The sweater is accompanied by who pitched for the Braves and Blue Jays from 1986-1995. A second printing hardcover copy of Astronauts: The Story of Project Mercury, America's Man in Space Program (1960) is boldly Program participants: Malcolm Carpenter, Leroy Cooper, John Glenn, Virgil "Gus" Grissom, Walter M. Schirra, Jr., Alan B. Shepard, and Donald "Deke" K. Slayton (est. $4,000-$5,000) Thomas A. Edison, John Burroughs and Harvey Firestone, three important figures from early 20th century history as well as close personal friends, each signed a privately printed copy of their travel journal, In Nature's Laboratory, documenting a 2-week-long road trip from Orange, N.J. to southern Canada undertaken during the summer of 1916. The journal features 44 original photographs showing the celebrity friends resting, eating, and conversing (est. $4,000-$5,000).
