The updated website highlights the company's dedication to creating high-quality custom cabinetry, millwork, and architectural details for residential and commercial clients while offering a modern, easy-to-navigate platform for users. As an industry leader in bespoke craftsmanship, Sixth Avenue Custom's redesigned site now makes it even easier for potential clients to engage with their work.

Six generations ago, Ezra Beachley began crafting high-quality furniture with unmatched precision and care. Now, his great, great, great grandson Ryan Beachley carries that same ethos forward with Sixth Avenue Custom, a company set on maintaining tradition while embracing the future. "Our model and process is not the ordinary way of doing things. It's unique, it's custom, it's the Sixth Avenue Custom way," said Ryan. This philosophy of blending old-world craftsmanship with modern tools and technologies is front and center on the newly launched website. The updated site offers an engaging, user-friendly experience and showcases the company's vast portfolio of exquisite residential and commercial projectsâ€”from bespoke cabinetry to intricate architectural millwork.

The updated website also introduces responsive design features, ensuring visitors can easily access the company's portfolio and services across any device, from desktops to smartphones. In addition to a more polished look and feel, the website now offers smoother navigation, allowing users to browse through service offerings, explore more content about the company's process, and quickly request consultations. By including a dedicated blog and expanded resource sections, Sixth Avenue Custom aims to educate clients about the nuances of custom millwork, giving them the knowledge they need to make informed decisions for their spaces.
