Inflection has published a blog entitled What To Look For In a Business Financial Advisor to equip its clients with the tools they need to make the right choice for their circumstances.

What is a Financial Advisor?

A financial advisor is a professional who offers their experience, knowledge and guidance to assist clients in making the best decisions for their circumstances. An advisor does not make decisions on behalf of clients; instead, they contribute their expertise across shifting markets and sectors to serve as a sounding board and guide for those looking to secure their financial wellbeing.

Creating a Financial Plan

A financial plan is a strategy developed cooperatively with a client that establishes their goals and means of meeting them. This could include investments, savings strategies, account management and more. Advisors with years of experience understand what important changes should be considered before clients commit money to certain accounts or projects in order to minimize losses and create new opportunities for financial growth.

Establishing a financial plan can be difficult even in the best of times, and current news of a potential recession only complicates matters. Whether or not clients should adjust their portfolios, or weather out the storm, will come down to their own individual situations. This is the backbone of financial planning.

How Inflection Advisors Is Helping Clients

Inflection Advisors understands that choosing the right financial advisor can feel like a challenge, especially for clients who do not know what to look for.

Remember, a financial advisor can help you to:

- Determine whether to hold or sell investments
- Choose the best funds for your money
- Shift your spending to recession-adjacent options like debt repayment
- Strategize about how to maximize returns in a bear market

Inflection shares more about the process of choosing a competent advisor in their new article What to Look For In a Business Financial Advisor. This piece of guidance provides an overview of the most important aspects of a client's business and the questions clients should be asking to make sure their candidate is a good fit.
