The market growth can be attributed to the rise in production and sales of automobiles and increased customer awareness about road, vehicle, and passenger safety. Besides, advances in technology to improve customer experiences and the advent of connected cars are propelling the growth of the Saudi Arabia automotive head-up display (HUD) market. Due to rising road accidents, leading authorities are making strict traffic regulations to ensure vehicle and passenger safety by incorporating head-up display, which provides critical information to drivers about navigation, speed, and other data related to driving assistance. Rapid urbanization, improving living standards, and a rising personal disposable income allow people to acquire private vehicles for daily commute. The National Industrial Development Center (NIDC) aspires to recruit 3-4 original equipment manufacturers across the electric vehicle and internal combustion supply chain to conform with the objective and goal outlined by key authorities in Saudi Vision 2030. Market participants are pouring money into research and development to increase the performance and visibility of vehicle head-up displays. With the introduction of automotive head-up displays that can be fitted into motorcycle helmets, riders can now view navigation maps, messages, and phone notifications while driving. The integration of augmented reality technology in head-up displays provides a 3D map analysis of the way, keeping the driver interested and active while guaranteeing that the driver's eyes never leave the road. Furthermore, the emergence of the aftermarket, which may provide services and automobile parts based on client wants, is predicted to fuel the growth of the Saudi Arabia automotive head-up display (HUD) market during the next five years.
