Message

Winston and Cowboy Mike are buddies for life. Animals have been the most wholesome companions of humans for centuries. They bring comfort and joy with their presence in our mundane lives. Caring for them is like self-care. Be it a dog, cat, bird, or pony; a pet is the purest friend you can ask for. Our furry companions not only make us feel better when we're having a bad day, they understand us. They talk to us; communicate with us in their own unique way. Remember when you came home from work after a long, tiring day? You didn't want to do anything. But you instantly felt better when your cat jumped into bed with you and snuggled your arm. There's nothing better than knowing your furry friend will always be by your side! ^ The journey of Cowboy Mike and Winston is no different. It's a bond of affection and care. The perfect example to teach children the importance of having a pet. Like Winston, animals are accepting, selfless, consistent, and openly affectionate to their owners. They fulfill a person's need for companionship, love, and self-worth. ^ The relationship dynamic between Winston and Cowboy Mike is interesting and adorable. They are the ideal duo to help young ones understand the value of keeping a furry friend. Their daily adventures are an engaging and educative read for toddlers. Here is how they embody the relationship between Man and pets. ^ Winston and Cowboy Mike Make Each Other Happy Winston and Cowboy Mike embody a symbiotic relationship. They are like a dose of serotonin (the happy hormone) for each other. Caring for pets can improve mood and reduce the feeling of loneliness. Snuggling up to your animal friend can immediately brighten a person's day. This is exactly what Cowboy Mike experiences when he sees Winston. His only friend who listens to his joys and sorrows and neighs in triumph when he sees him every morning. ^ Cowboy Mike Looks Out for Winston Pet owners are guardians of their animals. According to science, pets can improve their owners' physical and mental health. But this care goes both ways. If an animal is helping you cheer up, you should help them cheer up! They also need careful nurturing and protection to return the same. ^ Michael D. Eastwood educates children about caring for their pets in his book A Day in the Life of Cowboy Mike and Winston. Like how cowboy Mike looks out for his pony Winston, every child should protect and care for their pets. ^ They Know Each Other's Languages. It is overlooked that most pet owners speak their animal's language better than their own. They may not be fluent since it would mean they must become an animal themselves^ but they are good at it.^ If Cowboy Mike had to live in a "Pony's only" world, he could easily spend his whole life there. Because he understands Winston so well., Cowboy Mike knows when Winston is feeling sad or happy. He would know when Winston is happy by the swishing of his tail. Or that he is being affectionate when he nuzzles Cowboy Mike's face with a slow snort. ^ All these actions make Cowboy Mike and Winston pals for life. The beauty of their bond can be seen in any pet-owner bond around you. Like the neighborhood cat lady whose cats run to her when she whistles. Or the pet golden retriever at the park who plays dead when his human says bang bang.^ ^ In a Nutshell, This Bond Goes Both Ways! Michael D Eastwood's Book A Day in the Life of Cowboy Mike and Winston is the cutest reflection of his love for his pony and his enthusiasm for the young ones to learn about them.^ ^ Cowboy Mike takes care of his dear Winston like his family, and Winston returns it by showering him with unconditional love. Don't let your children miss out on the daily shenanigans of Cowboy Mike and Winston. Grab your copy now!
